Paid Survey Sites: Can You Really Make Money Answering Surveys, Or Is It Just A Scam?

The short answer is Yes, there are quite a companies on the net that pay you to answer surveys. There are many sites out there that are legitimate. Among those, some are better than others. More..

Online Surveys Are A Low Cost Way For Legitimate Marketers To Gather Huge Amounts Of Data

This is a much cheaper method of getting consumer information than sending people out to stores, malls, or going door to door.

It's even cheaper than doing phone surveys, because they don't have to pay a person to collect survey information. That's why there is such a demand for this.

Once they find people that fit a certain profile, they are willing to pay even more for your opinion by inviting you to join consumer panels or focus groups.

Depending on your occupation, or number and ages of children, you may fit right in as an expert. You could be a computer expert, an expert Mother, or an expert shopper for example. Some of these groups pay very well.

There Are Several Of High Quality Survey Companies (That Are Definitely Not Scams) Listed Here With Free Signup So That You Can Try This Without Spending A Penny.

If you don't happen to know, I'll just mention what survey sites are about.

Thousands of (many large) companies pay agencies to collect data about consumer opinion. I remember once, someone in a shopping mall actually paid me $20 to fill out a survey.

Now, many surveys are taken on the Internet. They might ask you which magazine cover you like the best and why. Or, they might ask you what deodorant you use.

They just want to know what consumers are thinking. They are willing to pay for your opinion, because they stand to make a lot more money if they market a product more efficiently, or make it more appealing.

You can actually make a very good living, just filling out online surveys. I rated a few of the top survey directories for you. To make a real full-time income, you have to sign up with a large number of survey companies, so that you receive several surveys a day.

Some survey sites are looking for product testers. They have you do the product testing and give them feedback about the product. Product testers get to keep whatever is their testing. They also get paid for answering a questionnaire about the product.

They also create focus groups, where people discuss the product together.

As I rate more paid survey directories, I will add their rating.

One note: The paid survey directories that charge you to join vary a great deal in quality. The best ones frequently update their database to make sure that the sites still exist and that there are no problems with them.

The three sites that are reviewed here are professional directory sites that receive payment through Clickbank, which has very strict regulations regarding refunds. You can request a refund from the merchant for up to eight weeks. If they won't give it to you, Clickbank will. Also, Clickbank now in addition to accepting credit cards and echecks, also accepts Paypal, which many people already have.

Paid Survey Directory Reviews

These sites rated below charge a one-time fee for membership, but list hundreds of places to register and take surveys, join focus groups, do product testing, etc. If you search the net, you can eventually find the sites they list, along with a lot of junk sites, but how much is your time worth? Plus, the sooner you have the information, the sooner you can start getting surveys and making money.

A word of caution: These directories list hundreds of sites. Some (of the sites they list) are better than others. My suggestion is to pick sites that pay in cash. Look at the privacy policy before signing up. If they require you to apply for anything like credit cards, don't bother - unless you wanted to anyway.

Paid to read sites pay you for receiving emails and actually reading them. They are generally a waste of time - most only pay the equivalent of a few cents per hour (although I have heard rumors that some pay well). After trying this for a while, I never was paid anything. I noticed some of (if not all) of the directories I recommend list some information about them. Since you end up getting bombarded with spam, I recommend you do not sign up for them.

I am only recommending signing up for paid surveys.

You can also do a google search to find out if any of the sites listed are a problem to others. Some people are very happy with these directories, some are not. It probably depends on the listed sites that are individually picked. It also depends on how you fit a profile of the type of information they're looking for. Also, you just can't please everyone, so don't expect all glittering reviews.

If you decide to get a refund on any of these and have any problems getting it, let me know - I will help - really. I do not think I can help after the refund period expires (currently 8 weeks).

You have to manually type my email in to reach me. If I just put a link in, I will be spammed mercilessly. Also, if you have any comments, good or bad, feel free to contact me. I don't even really care whether you signed up for these through this site or not. I will still try to help. If it turns out that there are too many requests for this, I am reserving the right to retract this offer at any time without notice.

This is from another, local information site I have, but I check it frequently.

Also, if you have any information, good or bad about anything on this site, send me an email and I will post it - unless it's absolutely outrageous.

1. Survey Scout

- They list hundreds of paid survey agencies. Well organized site, excellent, responsive support. Some of their features:
- Excellent customer service. They (at this time) have four full time reps just for answering emails.
- Their database has a green check mark next to the best survey opportunities.
- They have excellent instructions on how to do this whole process on the site.
- There is a list of other bonus information and sites for more ways to make money, like getting paid to drive a car (with an ad on the doors).
- I personally have been in contact with them for questions through the member contact form. They responded within 8 hours (not bad for a large site).
- There is information on the site written by someone who has been doing surveys for over 30 years and currently makes over $2600 per month part time.
- Sign up fee (One time) $34.95 - definitely worth it in my opinion. It's a lot of work maintaining a database of active sites, plus responding to customers questions.
- Special Offer On This Site Only (For A Very Limited Time): If you sign up for this through this book or web site and decide it was something you want to do, I'll send you a $10 rebate after the 8 week trial period (Rebates Through Paypal Only - So I don't have to deal with mailing money internationally). Just forward your purchase confirmation email to webmaster@syraction.com
- If you do not have a Paypal account sign up here <http://www.paypal.com>
- If you were thinking about joining anyway, why not get the membership for $10 cheaper? The net cost will be twenty five bucks. And - it save you a ton of searching and trial and error.

The next two survey sites are also listed with Clickbank. I have never actually signed up for these, or visited their members section.

The main reason I am listing them is that they sell through Clickbank. I know Clickbank is a reputable site. If you have a problem with one of these sites, Clickbank will see that you get a refund (within the 8 weeks from date of purchase).

2. Survey Platinum

Make $65 instantly with Survey Platinum. After you sign up you can immediately make almost double your registration fee. Lists 400+ survey sites.

3. Paid Surveys Online

Similar to the other two directories, they offer a very large list of companies that pay you to take surveys, join focus groups and test products. They have some nice bonuses for signing up, including a survey that you take right away that pays you $25.

Signup fee: $34.95 Net cost after survey: $9.95
